No trams on the Eccles via MediaCityUK line

Changes to services

Essential track renewal works have been timed to coincide with the changes taking place at St Peter's Square.

This means there will be no trams running on this line, however there will be a bus replacement service in operation for customers to use.

Key dates

There will be no trams running on the Eccles via MediaCityUK line from 26 June.

Trams will resume running between Deansgate-Castlefield and MediaCityUK from early August. Services on the rest of the line will resume from late August.

Normal service resumed

From late August the track renewal works will be complete. Full services on the Eccles line will resume and the new St Peter's Square stop will open to customers, restoring services across the network.

This summer we're giving the Eccles Metrolink line a new lease of life, with a major track renewal programme.

Work will start on 26 June and while we'll need to stop running trams along the line, it will reopen in phases. Services from Deansgate-Castlefield to MediaCityUK will resume in early August and the full service will run through to Eccles by the end of August.

We've planned the work to take place during the quieter summer period, at the same time as we complete the new stop at St Peter's Square. Metrolink services will stop running through the square from 26 June so we can apply the finishing touches to the new stop at the end of August.

Of course, you will still be able to travel along the Eccles via MediaCityUK line and through Manchester city centre either by replacement bus services or by following clearly signposted walking routes (city centre only).

Thanks for bearing with us while we complete these essential improvement works as efficiently as possible. Please see the network map above to see routes running until late August 2016.
